Dr. David B. Burks,
President

Harding's success is best measured in the fact that students leave this school with a servant's heart.

Don Robinson's acrylic painting shows the play of light on the stately columns of the Administration Auditorium. The four birds represent students testing their wings. More works by this former chair of the art and design department are featured beginning on page 12.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

High rankings — and much more

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Burks asked Dr. Neale Pryor to be his guest writer this edition. Dr. Pryor has done admirable work as vice president for academic affairs the past 18 years, and he has some unique insights into the University's tradition of academic excellence.

WHILE THE UNIVERSITY is not consciously seeking high rankings in national magazines, it is good to see that such teams of college experts recognize the academic excellence of our school.

U.S. News and World Report in September ranked us 20th among regional universities of the South, and, in terms of value, we ranked 10th. The ranking was based on factors such as student retention, academic reputation, graduation rate, student/faculty ratio and alumni giving. This is the seventh consecutive year that the University has been nationally ranked in this magazine.

But Harding also has a strong reputation as a spiritual, doctrinally sound university. It is known in the brotherhood of the churches of Christ as a school that has remained faithful to her purpose for more than 75 years. It is our dual success that truly sets Harding apart.

A WINNING SPIRIT

Our students have gained recognition in almost every academic area. A few of the more notable achievements are given; a complete list would be too lengthy to share.

Our computer programming team made it to the international finals of the Association for Computer Machinery/IBM programming contest in 2000.

For the past four years, our nursing graduates have ranked first in the state on scores on the licensure exam. The University's pass rate in 1999 was 97.2 percent, compared with the national pass rate of 84 percent. Similarly, our students have maintained a 100 percent pass rate for at least the past 30 years on the NTE-FCS (home economics) specialty exam and a 100 percent pass rate on the Registered Dietician exam for the past 10 years.

The School of Business won many honors in national competition this past year. The business team took second place honors in the national competition at San Jose, Calif. The Society for the Advancement of Management won first place in case competition in Las Vegas.

A WORLD OF OPPORTUNITY

These broad-ranging achievements by our students are fostered by the large span of opportunities for academic growth that we offer. For instance, five semester abroad programs are available in Italy, Greece, Australia, England and the recently approved Chile campus.

In the fall 633 exceptionally well-prepared students participated in the Honors College. Having 211 freshmen in the College gives us a participation rate of 70 percent among those eligible. With smaller, interdisciplinary and skills-oriented general classes and upper level contract courses, the Honors College challenges students to meet their potential.

Harding's American Studies Institute gives students the chance to see and hear those world leaders and experts they study about in their classes. In the past few years, Mikhail Gorbachev, Margaret Thatcher, President George Bush and Colin Powell have spoken on campus.

A "HEART-AND-MIND" PRODUCT

In view of our mission, the most relevant measure of our success is not in the students' performance in national competition and test scores. And it is not in the wide range of opportunities the University offers.

Harding's success is best measured by the fact that students leave this school with a servant's heart. For instance, the number of majors in the College of Bible and Religion has increased to more than 400 this year. More than 500 students went on spring break campaigns, and 300 went on missions campaigns this past summer.

Most dramatically, last year one of our students was desperately in need of treatment that cost far more than her family was able to pay. Following an appeal in chapel, students, faculty and staff raised more than $60,000.

The proof of the University's academic excellence is evident in the accomplishments of our graduates. Firms are now interviewing our accounting and computer majors as juniors for employment upon graduation. Students who have completed all four years of their premedical education at Harding have had a 94.4 percent admission rate to medical school for the past three years. Many are now in graduate schools at prestigious universities such as Harvard, Chicago, Vanderbilt, Emory and Notre Dame.

However, another kind of achievement also measures the success of our graduates. Instead of getting caught up in the accolades bestowed upon them, they choose to live a life of service. One of our 2000 graduates, David Duke, earned a 4.0 grade point average in physics and mathematics. A National Merit and Governor's Scholar, he was a leader on the computer programming team. In the summer of 1999, David was chosen for the NASA Academy at Goddard Space Flight Center.

Opportunities for employment at prestigious firms and doctoral studies at exclusive universities are his. However, this year he has gone with some of his colleagues to work at Chepkong'ony High School in Kenya, East Africa, as a teacher, coach and Bible study leader.

Academic excellence at Harding is demonstrated in many ways, including the honors and positions her graduates have won. But the servant spirit that characterizes so many Harding graduates clearly illustrates the mark of the truly educated person — one who in every respect is a scholar, but one who also knows that the real value of a great education is its application to serving God and others. — Dr. Neale Pryor

Adams receives clinical psychologist licensure

Dr. Glen Adams, assistant professor of psychology, recently passed his licensure exam to become a fully licensed clinical psychologist in Arkansas.

Bowling chosen for Christian publisher's board

Dr. Jerry Bowling, assistant professor of Bible, was elected to the board of the elementary curriculum called "Life Links to God," by 21st Century Christian Publications in Nashville, Tenn.

Tax return research topic of Brown's presentation

Dr. Phil Brown, associate professor of accounting, presented a paper titled "Income Level and Income Types as Determinants of Tax Return Preparation Fees: An Empirical Investigation" at the National American Accounting Association in August. He was also named to the 2000-01 edition of Who's Who Among American Educators.

Daniel gives session on diversity and technology

Dr. Ellen Daniel, professor of family and consumer sciences, attended the 2000 American Association of Family and Consumer Sciences annual meeting and exposition in Chicago, June 24-27. She co-presented a session titled "Revisiting Cultural Diversity in an Age of Technology."

Priest, Long and Sheldon administrative promotions announced

THREE ADMINISTRATORS were chosen in November for new responsibilities and promotions. Dr. Dean Priest and Dr. Larry Long will move into new positions in June, and Todd Sheldon accepted his new post in November.

Priest, assistant vice president for academic affairs and dean of the College of Sciences, will become vice president for academic affairs. Long, dean of both the Honors College and the College of Arts and Humanities, will become the associate vice president for academic affairs.

Dr. Dean Priest

Priest succeeds Dr. Neale Pryor, who is retiring in June from the vice president's position. Pryor has served as chief academic officer since 1983, and he will return to the classroom as a professor in the College of Bible and Religion at the beginning of the 2001 fall semester.

A member of the faculty since 1962, Priest was chairman of the mathematics department and dean of the College of Arts and Sciences before assuming his current position. He is a distinguished professor of mathematics, having received the Distinguished Teacher Award in 1969, 1974 and 1984.

Priest holds the B.S. degree from Harding and the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Mississippi.

Long joined the faculty in 1976 and was named dean of the College of Arts and Humanities in 1999. A distinguished professor of English, he was selected as a Distinguished Teacher in 1982, 1987 and 1997. He has directed the Honors College since 1989.

Dr. Larry Long

Long is a 1972 graduate of Abilene Christian University and holds both the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Ohio State University.

Priest and Long will continue to serve as deans of their respective colleges in addition to their new assignments.

Sheldon was promoted to the position of assistant vice president for finance. Since 1998 he had served as the director of finance. He first joined the staff in 1990 as director of accounting.

Todd Sheldon

His responsibilities include directing the accounting, budgeting, payroll, business office, loan office and purchasing operations of the school. A 1983 Harding alumnus, Sheldon is a certified public accountant. Before joining the University's staff, he worked seven years for the state of Arkansas in its legislative audit division.

Coach, politician, judge to speak in spring ASI lecture series

HOUSTON NUTT, the University of Arkansas' head football coach, will speak Feb. 13 to begin the spring American Studies Institute's Distinguished Lecture Series. In his first season, Nutt revitalized interest in Arkansas' program and led his team to nine victories, a spot in the Florida Citrus Bowl, and its first top-20 finish in 10 years. In Nutt's first two seasons, Arkansas was 12-0 in games played at Little Rock and Fayetteville.

Houston Nutt

A Little Rock native, Nutt has been involved in the Razorback program since he was 5 and went to games with his father. He played quarterback for Arkansas and returned as a graduate assistant coach in 1983 after a brief stint playing for Oklahoma State University.

Angela "Bay" Buchanan, also a coach of sorts, will speak March 8. She served as her brother Pat Buchanan's presidential campaign chairperson in 1992, 1996 and 2000. She currently serves as president of the American Cause, the organization founded by her brother. In the summer of 1996, George magazine recognized her as one of the top 20 political women in the nation. She also served as a political analyst for "Good Morning America" throughout the general election in 1992.

Buchanan began her political career as the national treasurer of Ronald Reagan's presidential campaigns in 1980 and 1984, and she was appointed by Reagan as treasurer of the United States in 1981. At the age of 32, she was the youngest person to hold that position since it was established in 1775.

Angela "Bay" Buchanan

Judge Kenneth W. Starr, who served as independent counsel from August 1994 to October 1999, will wrap up the lecture series April 19. He is currently an adjunct professor at New York University School of Law and a distinguished visiting professor at George Mason University School of Law while on leave of absence from the firm of Kirkland & Ellis P.C., where he is a partner.

Starr, a Harding alumnus, served as solicitor general of the United States from May 1989 to January 1993. He argued 25 cases before the Supreme Court and represented the U.S. government on legal issues involving regulatory and constitutional statutes. He has received numerous honors and awards, including the Jefferson Cup award from the FBI, the Edmund Randolph Award for Outstanding Service in the Department of Justice, and the Attorney General's Award for Distinguished Service.

Kenneth Starr

All of the lectures will be held in Benson Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. They are free and open to the public.

Chile site of fifth international campus

ADDING TO THE LIST of international studies programs, the University will launch its semester program in the fall of 2002 in the seaside city of Viña del Mar, Chile, 70 miles northwest of Santiago.

According to Dr. Jeff Hopper, assistant dean of International Studies, the University chose Chile for its stable government and economy, its relative safety and the abundance of cultural opportunities for students. "It meets all the criteria for students in a good way," he says.

Though still in the planning stages, proposed classes would include beginning and intermediate Spanish, environmental science, introduction to international traveling, humanities and Bible.

Outside of class, students would participate in excursions such as horseback riding; trips to the Straits of Magellan, the southern glaciers of the Patagonia region, and the Atacama Desert; and a four-day hike in the Andes, ending in the Incan ruins in Machu Picchu, Peru.

The University also maintains international campuses in Brisbane, Australia; London, England; Florence, Italy; and Athens, Greece. The addition to the International Studies program is partly in response to their increasing popularity among students. According to Hopper, most students prefer to study abroad during their sophomore year.

But slots for the campus in Florence, currently the only year-round program, are full until summer 2002.

"The programs have grown to the point that, in order to be assured of a spot, students have to sign up while they're still in high school," he says. "A goal of the administration is that at least half of all students participate in a semester overseas."

In order to help meet that goal, the Athens program will expand to be offered each year in both fall and spring semesters, beginning spring 2001. The London and Australia programs will be offered in alternate spring semesters.

Forty students will attend the initial semester in Chile. For more information on Chile or any of the International Studies programs, call Mary Lou Daugherty, secretary of the International Studies programs, at (501) 279-4529.

Greek campus purchased

THE UNIVERSITY has completed the purchase of an Athens, Greece, hotel that will serve as the campus facility for the school's International Studies program in the country.

The purchase of the Artemis Hotel in Porta Rafti, a suburb of Athens, was finalized Nov. 24 when Dr. David Burks signed the necessary papers. The University took possession of the $1.8 million property Dec. 1, and classes on the campus will begin Jan. 24.

Earlier this year administrators had announced the expansion of the school's program in Greece to include year-round offerings. The purchase of the property was part of those expansion plans.

The international studies program in Greece began in 1994. Until now the courses were offered only during the fall semester of each year. Approximately 40 students will study at the new site each semester.

The Artemis Hotel has 24 apartment-style, fully furnished units. Six are two-bedroom, and 18 are one-bedroom units. Each unit has a living room, dining room, kitchen and bath.

Built in 1986, the facility, in addition to providing classroom space, has a library and a computer room. It also has a dining room that will seat approximately 200, a commercial kitchen, game room, patio area and swimming pool.

The property has four retail businesses adjacent to the hotel on the street level. The shops include a fast food restaurant, boutique, barbershop and a bakery. The new campus is approximately 10 miles from Athens' new airport, which is scheduled to open in March of next year.

"We are very excited about the addition of this facility to our international studies program in Greece," Burks said. "It will enhance the program we already have established, and we will be able to use the facility as a Christian conference center for both students and faculty."

Spring Sing 2001, the odyssey

A JOURNEY through time and space awaits guests of Spring Sing, April 12-14.

Epic characters and points in time set the stage for the theme, "The Odyssey: Journey into Myth and Legend," according to director Steve Frye, associate professor of communication.

Frye says it's a theme he's been anticipating for years, and the elements of "magic and mystery" are sure crowd-pleasers.

Making encore performances as host and hostess are senior Joe Yale of Kennett, Mo., and junior Shelley Lawson Faulkner of Searcy. They will be joined this year by senior Kimberly Kell Hodges of Searcy and sophomore Joey Kincheloe of Chesapeake, Va.

They, along with the ensemble, will lead the audience through the myths of the Greeks and Egyptians to today's science fiction and fantasy. "Elvis will even make an appearance during the performance," says Frye.

Opposite Spring Sing, senior theater major Pete Vann will direct "The Compleat Works of Wllm Shkspr (abridged)," a comedy by the Reduced Shakespeare Co. — three surfers-turned-actors from California.

"The premise is that three people do all of Shakespeare's works in three hours," Vann says. The show will be performed Friday and Saturday and the weekend following Spring Sing.

Admission for Spring Sing is $7 for Thursday night and $10 for Friday and Saturday nights. Tickets for both productions may be ordered using the insert in this magazine.

Doran earns marriage and family therapist licensure

Dr. Faye Doran, professor of art, completed examinations conducted by the Arkansas Board of Examiners in Counseling and has received the status of licensed marriage and family therapist and licensed professional counselor. She has also met the requirements to become a clinical member of the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapists. She recently conducted an eight-hour workshop at John Brown University on using art in children's therapy.

Elrod Governor's School instructor

Dr. Mark Elrod, associate professor of political science, served for the fourth year as an Area II instructor at the Arkansas Governor's School in Conway during the summer.

Hunt presenter at literary association meeting

Dr. Larry Hunt, assistant professor of English, presented a paper, "Se Hehsta Craeft: The Figure of Wisdom in Alfred's Translation of De Consolatione Philosophiae," at a meeting of the Arkansas Philological Association Oct. 21 in Memphis, Tenn.

Jewell begins ninth term as officer in history association

Dr. Fred Jewell, professor of history and political science, was elected to his ninth two-year term as secretary-treasurer of the Arkansas Association of College History Teachers at the annual meeting in Little Rock in October. He has served in this office since October 1984.

Keller elected officer of art educators' organization

Dr. John E. Keller, professor of art and department chair, began serving a two-year term as treasurer for Arkansas Art Educators this fall. He also made a presentation at the spring National Art Education Association Conference in Los Angeles.

Myhan, Patton present on public health nursing

Jerry Myhan, associate professor of nursing, and Charlotte Patton, assistant professor of nursing, gave an oral presentation at the 128th annual meeting of the American Public Health Association in Boston Nov. 12. The presentation was titled "Public Health Nursing Education: Using International Clinical Sites for the Baccalaureate Nursing Student."

Plummer publishes articles on reptiles

Dr. Mike Plummer, professor of biology, published four papers in 2000: "Ecological Aspects of Shedding in Free-Ranging Hognose Snakes," in Herpetological Natural History; "Natural History Notes: Crotalus Scutulatus, Thermal Stress," in Herpetological Review; "Spatial Ecology and Survivorship of Resident and Translocated Hognose Snakes," in Journal of Herpetology; and "Opheodrys Aestivus," in Catalogue of American Amphibians and Reptiles.

Stubblefield gains certification

Barbara Stubblefield, secretary for Advancement at the Graduate School of Religion, received her Certified Professional Secretary certificate in May.

Circle of Excellence Award recognizes University's fund-raising performance

THE COUNCIL FOR ADVANCEMENT and Support of Education (CASE) selected the University as an award winner in the 2000 Circle of Excellence Awards Program for educational fund raising.

Harding was one of 43 independent schools, colleges or universities receiving the award in the overall fund-raising performance category. More than 1,200 educational institutions in the nation were evaluated based on criteria formulated by CASE and the Council for Aid to Education (CAE).

The 2000 award marks the second time the University has been recognized by CASE. In 1996 the school received the Circle of Excellence Award in the fund-raising improvement category.

CASE and CAE used data compiled on the more than 1,200 schools for the past three years to recognize institutions that showed solid growth in fund-raising programs, a breadth in the base of support for the schools, and other indications of mature, well-maintained fund-raising programs. The data was given to a panel of national judges who chose the winners.

In the past three years Harding has raised more than $47.4 million and has completed capital campus expansion and renovation projects totaling $31.5 million. During the same period the University's endowment, including annuities, has grown from $58.9 million to $96.1 million.

Responding to the award, Dr. David Burks said, "We are very pleased to be ranked with some of the nation's most successful fund-raising schools. We strive for excellence in every facet of our work, whether it is the classroom or in fund raising.

"This award certainly recognizes the diligence and professionalism of our advancement staff, and it also recognizes the commitment of an ever-growing number of donors who support the University. Harding would not be listed in the Circle of Excellence without the combined efforts of both staff members and donors."

Who's Who recognizes 70 students

FACULTY HAVE SELECTED 70 students for inclusion in the 2000 edition of Who's Who Among American Universities and Colleges.

A campus committee nominated the students on the basis of their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential for continued success. After a faculty vote, the following students were accepted by the editors of the annual directory.

Students included are Melissa Austin, Reagan Baber, Christina Banks, Dustin Barte, Rachel

Also selected are Ciara Gary, Danette Gibbs, Rachel Grubb, Julia Henderson, Sarah Hickey, Jared Hobby, Dustin Howell, Caryn Hunnicutt, Jennifer Hutchinson, Heather Irwin, Clay Johnson, Andy Justus, McKensy Kemmerer, Jamie Lockwood, Taleen Luna, Rachel McCuiston, Matt Milligan, Emily Montandon, Gregory Moses, Lauren Moze, Adrienne Nunnally, Kendra Parker, Scott Parker, Summer Polk and Susan Polk.

Roberts to direct financial aid

DR. JONATHAN CRAIG ROBERTS has been named the new financial aid director at the University, effective Dec. 1. He will replace Zearl Watson, who retires Feb. 28.

Before accepting the position, Roberts served as an associate account executive for USA Group, promoting student loan products and services to members of the financial aid community. He also developed technical solutions and strategies to automate loan processing in a wide variety of higher education settings.

Roberts received the bachelor of arts degree in 1992, the master of science in administration in 1994, and the doctor of education in institutional management in 1999, all from Pepperdine University.

Her smile says it all

Advanced degree gives teachers immediate edge

TEACHERS CAN GAIN useful skills for today's classroom through the new master of arts in teaching (M.A.T.) degree, according to Dr. Jim Nichols, director of graduate studies.

The 15-month program offers 11 courses never before offered in Arkansas, Nichols says. Faculty will focus on issues applicable to the 2001 classroom: ways to align curriculum with state standards, trends in school reform, and methods for managing the learning environment.

"The classes are very basic and practical," says Nichols. "Teachers can use what they learn immediately."

Nichols says the idea for such a degree sprang from a request from Phillips Community College in Helena, Ark. The school's chancellor offered to host Harding's graduate studies program for an M.A.T. degree that would enhance the skills of local teachers.

Classes began in the fall, and so far the program has found great success, according to Nichols. This spring classes are being offered on the Searcy campus and extended to a new North Little Rock site.

Nichols says Arkansas' State Department of Education is pushing for teachers to earn advanced degrees in order to stay abreast of changes in the field. This particular M.A.T. degree is especially attractive because of its attainability, says Nichols, noting classes are held on Friday evenings and on Saturdays.

For more information about the new master of arts in teaching, contact Jim Nichols at the Graduate Studies Office, (501) 279-4315.

Church historian to address issues

WORLD-CLASS CHURCH HISTORIAN Dr. Everett Ferguson will speak on campus Jan. 26-27 to trace "The Eye of the Storm: Critical Issues Today."

His seminar, sponsored by the Institute for Church and Family, will focus on worship, women's roles and instrumental music in the church of Christ, says Dr. Howard Norton, director of the Institute.

"Dr. Ferguson is recognized all over the world for his work in church history," Norton says, noting Ferguson earned a doctoral degree from Harvard University after graduating from Abilene Christian University.

In other spring plans, the Institute will host a 15-in-1 seminar March 9-10. "Where 'The Eye of the Storm' is more theoretical, the seminar will be a very practical study," says Norton. Speakers from several states will present useful information about trends in Christian leadership, religious education, involvement and ministry.

The Women in God's Service (WINGS) and Men of God conferences will meet on campus April 20-21. Keynote speakers include Joy McMillon, former editor of the Christian Chronicle, and Jerry and Lynn Jones, founders of Marriage Matters seminar agency in St. Charles, Mo. The Joneses will present a couples seminar titled "Please Listen to Me."

For more information, contact the Institute at (501) 279-4660.

Sullivan awarded research endowment

Assistant professor of nursing Sheila Cox Sullivan recently received the $1,000 Beck Research Endowment Award for her research proposal on the circadian sleep-wake rhythm in elders with dementia.

Developmental teleconference moderated by Thompson

Dr. Linda Thompson, associate professor and director of Student Support Services, moderated a panel in September on "Developmental Education: Best Practices and Exemplary Programs," a nationally broadcast, live, interactive teleconference from Dallas. Approximately 170 colleges and universities across the United States received the teleconference.

Thompson also made the keynote presentation on developmental education at the Learning Assistance Association of New England (LAANE) in Burlington, Mass., Oct. 27, and she presented a session on "The Many Faces of Learning: Using Myers-Briggs Type Indicator to Understand Students' Diverse Learning Styles." Also at this conference, she received a plaque for the 2000 LAANE Award for Outstanding Service to Developmental Students.

Thornton presents paper on reading scores

Dr. Linda Thornton, associate professor of education and administrative assistant to the dean, presented a paper titled "The Effect of Phonemic Awareness Instruction in First Grade on the Reading Scores of Rural Primary Students" at the Mid-South Educational Research Association's annual meeting in November in Bowling Green, Ky.

Golf competes in three fall tournaments

The Bison golf team took to the links three times in the fall with its best result, a two-round 631, coming at the St. Gregory's Invitational in Shawnee, Okla. The squad also competed at the University of Central Arkansas Invitational in Conway, Ark., and the Drury/Deerfield Inn Classic in Springfield, Mo.

Senior Jeff Powell from New Braunfels, Texas, had a team-best 74.83 average round and finished in the top 20 in all three tournaments, twice making the top 10. Powell's best two-round score, 148, came at the St. Gregory's tournament.

Men's soccer wins five in first season

In its inaugural season, the Bison soccer team saw many ups and downs, finishing with a 5-11 overall record. The team was very young, competing with 15 freshmen on the 20-man roster.

Two of those freshmen, Mitch Jones and Zach Dameron, supplied the scoring punch for much of the season. Jones recorded five goals and a team-high six assists, while Dameron added six goals, three of them game-winners, and two assists.

Michael Allen saw the most goal-keeping action, recording a team-high two victories, including one shutout, and finishing with 2.73 goals against average. Searcy native Rees Jones played 11 matches in goal for the Bisons and also had a shutout.

Cross country teams among nation's best

FOR THE FIRST TIME since joining the NCAA in 1997, both the men's and women's cross country teams advanced to the Division II national meet. The Bisons finished 12th and the Lady Bisons placed 17th at the races held in Pomona, Calif.

In the women's race, sophomore Hanna Ritakallio finished 22nd, becoming the first Lady Bison to earn NCAA All-America honors. Ritakallio was the Lady Bisons' top runner all season and led the team to its first Gulf South Conference (GSC) championship at the conference meet in Huntsville, Ala. Her fourth-place finish at the South Regional Meet in Jacksonville, Fla., paved the way for the Lady Bisons' second-place finish in the region, which qualified them for nationals.

Jeff Langat and David Scharff are two of the five Bison runners who won All-Region honors. The team finished 12th at nationals.

Freshman Janet Kogo and senior Tia Tarole also earned All-GSC honors, and Kogo's ninth-place finish at regionals gave her All-Region honors as well. The team returns several other strong runners, including Britney Copeland, Amy Elliott, Sarah Reardon and Sara Treat, as Tarole was the only senior.

The Bisons, also loaded with underclassmen, won both the GSC title and the South Region Championship. Kenyans Linus Chepkwony and Jeff Langat were the team's top runners at the GSC meet, finishing first and third, respectively. Four other Bison runners, Scott Penick, Andrew Scharff, David Scharff and Scott Wietecha, earned All-Conference honors by placing in the top 10. Dustin Knudsen finished 22nd. Chepkwony, Langat, Penick, Wietecha and David Scharff also took All-Region laurels.

Coach Dr. Bryan Phillips received both the men's and women's Gulf South Conference Coach of the Year awards and claimed the men's South Region Coach of the Year award as well.

the team with 653 rushing yards and 10 touchdowns. Holliday added 337 yards and six scores.

Defensively, senior middle linebacker Said Perez landed 113 tackles to become the first Bison defender with more than 100 tackles in a season since 1996. Perez finished his career as the Bisons' all-time leader in tackles for loss, with 61, and more than 300 total tackles.

In the secondary, three juniors combined to head up the pass defense. Safety Jimi Holden was second in tackles and recovered a team-best four fumbles while intercepting two passes. Rover Dennis Cardoso ranked second with four interceptions and was third in tackles. Leading the team with five picks was cornerback Rashun Taylor, who added 11 pass breakups.

On the special teams, freshman Coy Nance connected on 10-of-15 field goals and 33-of-34 extra points. His 33 successful extra points tied Jeremy Thompson's school record. Langston handled the punting duties for most of the season, averaging 36.7 yards on 45 punts. Nance punted 19 times for a 34.6-yard average.

The Bisons were 4-1 for the season at home but lost five on the road, finishing the season at 5-6.

Tennis teams undefeated in fall action

THE MEN'S AND WOMEN'S tennis teams got off to a great start for the 2000-01 season by going undefeated in their fall dual matches.

The Bisons are 2-0 with a 7-2 win at Henderson State University and a 9-0 shutout of Hendrix College at Searcy. In singles play, Harding combined for an 11-1 individual record while going 5-1 overall in doubles.

The Lady Bisons have a 3-0 record thanks to wins over Henderson State University, the University of Central Arkansas, and NCAA Division I opponent Southeast Missouri State University. Individually, they are 17-2 in singles matches and 7-2 in doubles.

The Lady Bisons opened the season at the Freed-Hardeman University Classic where junior transfer Pernilla Axelsson swept through her bracket to win the tournament.

Season of firsts for Lady Bison Soccer

IN ONLY THE PROGRAM'S THIRD season, the Lady Bison soccer team recorded several firsts: a 10-win season, a regional ranking, a win over an NCAA Division I program, a 500 season in conference play, and two First Team All-Conference performers.

Senior midfielder Andrea Richmond was the catalyst for the Lady Bisons, tying for the team lead in goals, with nine, and registering eight assists. She had three game-winning goals and finished her career with 23 goals and a school-record 27 assists.

Junior midfielder Heather Gray earned First Team All-Gulf South Conference (GSC) honors, scored six goals and dished out a team-best 10 assists, six of which came in conference matches. Harding's other First Team performer was senior goalkeeper Jodi Besenyi who posted seven shutouts in 15 starts in 2000 and compiled 14 solo shutouts in her career. Her 1.27 goals against average this season was a career best and broke the University record.

Providing support for Besenyi were two Second Team All-GSC defenders, senior Michal Edwards and freshman Brooke Cockrell. The Lady Bison defense set school marks in 2000 for fewest goals and fewest shots allowed.

A solid freshman class provided two dependable goal scorers. Courtney Saul proved nearly unstoppable, notching a team-high-tying nine goals, including five in GSC play. Also rippling the net was Lyndsey Garner with five goals and two assists.

Late-season wins over the University of West Florida, the conference's second-ranked team, and Division I opponent Alabama A&M University opened eyes around the country, allowing the Lady Bisons to achieve a #10 ranking in the NCAA Division II South Region final poll.

Lady Bison volleyball completes winning season, makes playoffs

IN ITS FIRST YEAR in the Gulf South Conference (GSC), Lady Bison volleyball made its mark by clinching a playoff berth in the conference tournament, finishing 21-16 for the season and 6-6 in conference play. The 21 wins gave the Lady Bisons their third consecutive 20-win season.

Seniors Delana Keilers, Erika Pierson, McKensey Kemmerer and Rebecca Dahlstrom were leaders on the court. Keilers, the 1999 NCAA Division II blocking champion, led the team in blocking, with 1.32 blocks per game, and was third in digs with 318. Pierson was second in blocks with 1.25 per game and a hitting percentage of .293. Kemmerer, a setter, was second on the team in assists per game with 4.57. Defensive specialist Rebecca Dahlstrom contributed 1.82 digs per game.

With no juniors on the squad, the sophomores were expected to step up, and they responded. Heather Newman led the team with 6.51 assists per game and also contributed 2.12 kills per game. Hollingsworth was tops on the team in hitting with a .301 average and had a team-leading 2.90 kills per game.

Newcomers Veronica Piech, Shaila Farley, Lydia Kelly, Shathar Langston and Keri Jo Camp brought young blood and a competitive spirit to the team. Piech was second in kills per game, with 2.29, and digs, with 2.54 per game. Farley led the team in defense with 2.71 digs per game and also tallied 2.03 kills per game. Langston was key in the service-receive, with 194 receptions and 103 digs, and Camp brought height to the outside hitter position which helped her achieve 1.59 kills per game.

Keilers and Hollingsworth were the first two Lady Bisons to be selected to All-GSC teams. Keilers was second in the conference in blocks and was selected to the First Team All-GSC. Hollingsworth was selected to the Second Team All-Conference and was part of the Rockhurst Invitational All-Tournament team. Because of superior academic and athletic performances, Pierson was voted to her second-straight Academic All-District VI team.

Height, depth men's basketball strengths

WITH EIGHT PLAYERS 6-feet-5 or taller, the 2001 Bisons' size, depth and outstanding athletic ability give head basketball coach Jeff Morgan a team to be reckoned with in the Gulf South Conference.

Inside presence will be a welcome feature to this year's Bison team. More scoring from the inside will help fill the void left by the loss of last season's leading scorers Chris Hardaway and Levern Floyd.

Returning from last season's team are seniors Danny Jeune, Armand Etame and Dwayne McDonald.

Jeune is a strong scorer inside. The 6-foot-10 Etame spends his playing time in the center position. Another presence down low is 6-foot-7 McDonald, who is coming off a junior campaign in which he averaged 6.7 points and 3.4 rebounds per game.

An extremely solid group of sophomores, point guard Aaron Farley and forwards Jay Brogdon and Michael Jackson, are a key part of this team.

Farley brings speed to the point guard position. Jackson, a 6-foot-5 post player, was third in the Bisons' scoring list last season with 10.6 points and 7.7 rebounds per game. Brogdon plays both forward spots. Fellow sophomores Ashley Buford and Joe Merillat are also seeing action this season.

Six new faces joined the Bisons: junior college transfers Bruce Warren and Datron Wilson and freshmen Adam Langston, Darren McCrillis, Chase Melder and Chad Ware.

Seven returning players bolster Lady Bison team

ENTERING A NEW CONFERENCE brings a sense of excitement and anticipation for this year's Lady Bison basketball team. After losing five key players from the 1998-99 team, the Lady Bisons finished last season with a 9-17 record. Coach Brad Francis has a much-improved team this year with the return of seven players, four of whom are seniors.

Returning this season are seniors Josie Anderson, Krista Anderson, Stephanie Davis and Jennifer Williams. Also back are junior Mindy Napier and sophomores Susan Berry and Heather Lawrence.

Napier is the leading returning scorer and playmaker. Coming off a great season in which she averaged 13.3 points, 3.2 rebounds and 3.0 assists per game, she is an all-around versatile player.

Six new faces joined the team this season. Transfer Kendra Bell comes from Cloud County Community College in Kansas. Four Arkansas freshmen added to the 2000 Lady Bisons are Anne Fowlkes from Mountain View, Michia

French from Highland, and Lauren Hickmon and Elizabeth Woodroof from Searcy.

Texan Jennifer Andrews is another solid addition and will redshirt the 2000-01 season.

Hanging AROUND:

A glimpse into life after homework

by JUDIE KINONEN

IT'S ALMOST 10 P.M., and Midnight Oil Coffee House on Race Avenue is getting crowded.

Students enter shedding their backpacks. They greet friends already settled in, then get in line to stare at the wide array of options posted on a chalkboard behind the counter.

"I like breves and lattes," says senior Rachael Fatula, who joins friends at Midnight Oil several nights each week because "You know who's going to be there. If someone's not in their apartment, they're probably at Midnight Oil," she says.

Some spread their homework across one of the small, round tables or find a cozy spot on the couch to read a good book; but most are there for the music and the conversation.

And most don't realize that Harding students haven't always had it so good.

THE GOOD OL' DAYS

Monroe Hawley ('45) of Milwaukee and Virgil Lawyer ('46) of Searcy recall the days when students squeezed around a few tables in the south end of the Pattie Cobb basement, sipping regular old coffee.

Off-campus activity was scarce at best. When they wanted a change of atmosphere, students simply didn't have the money to "go out," says Lawyer, adding that even if they'd had the cash, "in the whole student body, there were only three or four cars."

So they were satisfied to stroll a couple of blocks to Buford's Beanery, a tiny mobile home where Lawyer and his brothers served up 15-cent hamburgers. "There were about eight stools to sit on by a bar — no booths," he recalls. "If you came in after those eight seats were full, you stood up behind them."

Those stools were almost always taken, says Lawyer. "People liked our prices and they liked our food. My wife says those were the best hamburgers she ever had," he says. Then he concedes, "Of course, she might be biased."

A PENNY SAVED

The 15-cent hamburger couldn't last, but inexpensive food has continued to draw Harding crowds through the decades.

That was the attraction of the old Frozen Delight on Race Avenue, where alumni as late as the 1980s bought burgers four-for-a-dollar one night each week. Says Walt Buce ('81), "The place was old, stank of onions, was heated by those old gas floor heaters and, generally, was in need of a major redo. But the hamburgers were cheap."

Even for those who don't brave the fried food, Frozen D's has provided generations of students with late-night desserts. Mary Ethel Bales Gale ('65) used to order the "pie in the sky," hot cherry pie with ice cream; Cari Johnson Bonneau ('90) says whenever she's in town she still visits the place, now located on Benton Street, for a hot-fudge and coffee milkshake.

"When I was in school you couldn't go there and not see someone you knew," says Bonneau. She recalls the only hangout more popular was the Wendy's on Race Avenue, where, "I was always writing checks for a junior Frosty."

"My mom kept asking, 'What are all these 73-cent checks that keep coming through?'"

LATE-NIGHT EXCURSIONS

When those neon fast-food signs dimmed for the night, students living off campus had to use their imagination, says Hanaba Munn Noack ('70). "I had always studied in the dorm lobby, so I had to find a new place."

That place was Ma's Truck Stop, an all-night diner off the old highway near Bald Knob. "It was a hole in the wall, and it's a stretch to call it a truck stop," says Noack.

Truck drivers did, however, drop in for biscuits and gravy around 5 a.m., and Noack and her crew were often still there to greet them after their own all-nighter. She recalls the shocked expressions on the truckers' faces one morning when they walked in to see art student Rick Smith ('71) finishing up his class project — a plasticene sculpture of an ear.

"Ma" treated her strange, nocturnal customers pretty well, but she wasn't afraid to enforce a few ground rules: "We weren't allowed to sit at the truck drivers' table," says Noack, and Harding students were barred from playing the pinball machine. Ma told them she didn't think the school's administration would approve.

"Sometimes on leaving we would lower the antenna on Dale Hardman's ('71) MG Midget and carefully drive under a parked truck," Noack says. "Daring stuff."

BEYOND THE TRENDS

But perhaps it's the least adventurous of Harding hangouts that is the most enduring: the Harding swing. Students today gather around those swings every evening for after-dinner conversation, just as they did back in the 1930s and 40s.

Hawley says it's no accident Harding-like swings are fixtures on other Christian college campuses, including York College, for which he serves on the board of trustees. "They became a prototype. When Harding people worked on the boards of other Christian schools, they brought the swings with them," he says.

He recalls that, with no money and no car for a night on the town, "I would meet on a swing to talk to my girl" — namely, Julia Trantum ('45), his wife of 55 years.

"I guess, as I reflect on it, we must have been pretty deprived," he says, then adds with a chuckle, "but we didn't know it." ■

Cathleen Shultz

A Mother by HEART

Although being unable to bear children has been one of her greatest heartaches, it has led her to one of her greatest joys.

by SUE WINN, photography by JEFF MONTGOMERY

THE MOTTO OF THE HARDING UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF NURSING IS "Developing Nurses as Christian Servants." Christian service is also the guiding force in the life of Cathleen Shultz, R.N., Ph.D., who has been dean of the school for nearly 25 years. ♡ Although her life today is characterized by a quiet strength of spirit that both lives and teaches Christian servanthood, she is quick to note that "my life would have turned out quite differently had it not been for the love and encouragement of godly men and women. Throughout my life, God has put into my life the people who needed to be there — people who helped to strengthen me to face the difficulties." ♡ The difficulties have been many through the years. She is the oldest of five children and relates that, in her early years, her father was an alcoholic and no one in her immediate family attended church. She has had several pregnancies end in miscarriage. As a young woman, she suddenly became a widow when the plane that her minister husband was piloting crashed.

Years later she married Dr. Sam Shultz, and the couple hoped for a "second chance" at starting a family. All these hopes were eventually lost, after much suffering and painful medical tests, with her doctor's announcement, "We don't know what the problem is, but we do know you need to have a hysterectomy right away."

Although heartbreaks like these might kill the spirit of some, Cathie says that for her they helped to develop a "rock-solid faith in God and a trust in His love no matter what comes. I feel such an assurance of God's love; it's so awesome!"

Cathie advises that, although she has had to "grapple with the verdict" of events in her life, much prayer has helped to ease the burdens. She has learned firsthand how "all things work together for good" (Romans 8:28).

"We have to remember that God does have a hand in the lives of Christians," Cathie continues, "even though we may not understand everything that happens. As Christians we are to make the best of every situation. It does help to learn to take things one day at a time instead of trying to figure out God's plan. It's so freeing."

"We simply offer unconditional love and involvement in the kids' lives. We're there for them no matter what happens."

Kathy Bodden and Sherrie Smith were announced as winners of the Dean's Scholarship at the Science and Nursing Convocation in April. The scholarship, in honor of Cathleen Shultz (right), was established by her husband, Sam.

Although being unable to bear children has been one of her greatest heartaches, it has led her to one of her greatest joys — that of spiritual adoption, one of her biggest areas of service to others. At last count, her family had grown to 38 children and 38 grandchildren.

Cathie says this ministry is "more fun than anything we've ever done!" She and Sam have grown their family from a very large circle of friends.

"When we found out we wouldn't be able to have a family of our own, we both questioned why God had given us such nurturing capacities and then not given us any children to nurture. Then we looked around us and thought, 'Well, what do we have? Maybe this isn't as great a loss as we think.'"

She continues, "We both have always loved young people, and we constantly seem to have a big group of teens and young adults around us. So we told ourselves, 'There are all these young people around us — why not do something for them?' We saw people who were hurting in various ways, and we thought we could be of service to them. And from that, our idea of a 'formal' adoption procedure was begun."

The Shultzes' concept of adoption is simple. Although it is not a legal adoption, it certainly is a spiritual one — one they call "an adoption of the heart." Cathie explains, "We have an actual adoption form that we individualize to each person needing love. But we only offer the adoption materials after our relationship has had time to develop, and never while they are current students at Harding, to avoid any chance of a perceived conflict. We simply offer unconditional love and involvement in the kids' lives. We're there for them no matter what happens."

Cathie marvels that "even though there's something going on all the time among 'our kids,' such as weddings, births, serious health problems and heartbreaking spiritual struggles, it doesn't come all at once. God works it out where we never have two weddings to attend at the same time or two serious trials to deal with at once. We just let Him take care of it all."

Although a great deal of time and effort is required to stay actively involved in the lives of so many kids scattered all over the country, this is just one of the ministries in which Cathie is involved. She has not been able to work as a nurse at the bedside for the last few years because of her own health problems, including fibromyalgia and knee replacement surgery, but she continues to be active and make a positive difference in the nursing profession.

Besides a very full calendar of administrative duties as dean of the School of Nursing, Cathie also teaches classes in nursing research and in the new master's program in nursing. She is active in several local and national nursing organizations and committees, works to raise funds for nursing scholarships, and writes about various health issues for magazine articles and nursing textbooks.

Despite all these accomplishments, without hesitation she states that, professionally, she is most proud of the medical mission campaigns that have been sponsored by the School of Nursing. The nursing students have touched lives in areas such as Kenya, Haiti, Honduras and Nigeria, as well as in the Searcy area through outreach programs such as disaster relief efforts and community health fairs.

Cathie has had the privilege to work on many of these medical missions herself. She proudly says, "Those campaigns have had the greatest effect spiritually, and they're my favorite way that the students are learning to truly become Christian servants!"

She is very involved in her home congregation, the Downtown Church of Christ in Searcy. The Shultz home has been used for several years to host a Wednesday evening Bible study group for college students. They also write a newsletter for the college students of the Downtown congregation.

Cathie can keep such a busy schedule, despite her health problems, by daily living Philippians 4:13: "I can do everything through Him who gives me strength." But she explains, "It's not that I can do anything by myself, but that He can work through me." She is able to bear so much fruit by making what's truly important the top priority in her life — and by being very organized.

She and her doctor husband compare their busy work schedules at the start of every month so they can plan ahead to be involved in church activities and worship services. "The top priority is the church. We just have to stop and think about what's important to us and what we want to accomplish. Some activities we just have to say no to because of time and priorities."

Cathie has learned how to apply one of her favorite scriptures, the parable of the talents told in Matthew 25, to every area of her life in order to be a productive servant for the Lord. "Each one of us has been given different talents," she emphasizes. "I truly believe we must use what God has given us. It's like God is saying to us, 'Here's what I've given you. What right do you have not to use it?'"

"I've learned that we could be gone tomorrow. We've only been given this one life, so we have to use it to the best of our abilities and to live each day fully." IH

The EYE is the WINDOW of the SOUL

by DON ROBINSON, chair of the art and design department from 1978-1998

ART HAS BEEN A MAJOR PART OF MY LIFE from my childhood. In elementary school, I entertained both myself and my peers by illustrating storybook characters in chalk on the blackboard. The encouragement of fellow classmates, teachers and family removed any doubt that may have been in my mind about whether I should be an artist. I considered going into advertising art, but chose teaching art as a profession because it encouraged the concepts of discovery, integration of knowledge, application and sharing. Teaching art as a profession has allowed me to pursue my love of art while engaged in teaching and encouraging thousands of young people in the development of their talents.

While I believe that art is self expression, I have found it to be much more than that. It is also sharing, informing, persuading, encouraging and uplifting. I have enjoyed exploring a variety of subject matter, forms and medium. Teaching in a relatively small art department has encouraged breadth. Yet, throughout this exploration, it has remained my conviction that art is at its best when it is done with unity of form and a positive goal in mind. I have tried to hold to a Christian ethic that seeks to lift the spirits of my fellow humans and honors the God who created us. I hope my work will leave the viewer with a greater sense of wholeness, peace and appreciation for the Creator and for the world He has made for us to enjoy. III

addresses importance of

FAMILY, COMMUNITY

by APRIL MOUSER, photography by JEFF MONTGOMERY

IN FRONT OF A CAPACITY CROWD in Benson Auditorium two weeks before Election Day, retired Gen. Colin Powell identified education, health care and security in homes and schools as the top range of priorities for the next administration. The first speaker in the 2000-01 American Studies Institute's Distinguished Lecture Series, he promoted "America's Promise — The Alliance for Youth," the group for which he serves as chairman, as a vehicle by which to help accomplish these ideals.

The organization, which was established at the Presidents' Summit for America's Future in Philadelphia in 1997 and endorsed by every living U.S. president, rests upon the "Five Promises" for children and youth: caring adults in their lives as parents, mentors, tutors and coaches; safe places with structured activities during nonschool hours; a healthy start and future; marketable skills through effective education; and opportunities to give back through community service. He said that young people today should not be referred to as "Generation X," but as "Generation Excellent."

His motivation for chairing such a group comes from his own childhood experiences. "I was an at-risk kid," he said. "My parents came to America in banana boats." But he grew up in the South Bronx where there was an accountability system made up of family members and the community. "Every time I looked up, there was an aunt looking down," he said. Faced with the question of "What should I do with my life now?" upon his retirement, Powell says he "felt a pull toward young people."

As an example of the implementation of America's Promise at the state and local levels, Powell pointed to the work Gov. George W. Bush has done in Texas with the "Texas Pledge."

"It's the governors, not Washington, who are getting things done," he said.

He also endorsed ARKids First, an Arkansas initiative to provide health care to children, as such an example of a grass-roots level approach. "We must invest in them now. ARKids has helped 47,000 kids already," he said.

The demand for tickets to Powell's presentation was so great that the program was simultaneously broadcast via closed circuit television to the Benson Auditorium lobby, Carter Auditorium and Heritage Auditorium. The

Janette Rogers ('69)

A new spin on education

"TEACHING gets a bad rap," says state university professor Janette Rogers — a woman in the business of changing that.

As president of the international Kappa Delta Pi (KDP) education honor society, Rogers works to instill her own passion for teaching in the next generation.

Her presidential duties take up a great deal of time, but Rogers chose to keep half her teaching load as a program director and education professor at Northeastern State University (NSU) in Tahlequah, Okla.

She travels often, visiting some of more than 600 university chapters and making lightning trips to speak at events, like the celebration last April when Harding's own KDP chapter turned 25.

Rogers says the work of this biennium hinges on a theme: "Opening the Gates to the Future." Her administration targets tomorrow's teachers, students as young as middle school age.

"We're needing to recruit them now; we can't wait until they've made up their minds," says Rogers. "We try to put teaching in a positive light."

In addition to recruiting, Rogers concerns herself with the factors that keep turning people off the profession: issues like low salaries, tough classroom discipline and a rising teacher dropout rate.

"So many are leaving in the first five years," says Rogers, who is involved with a "resident teacher" program in Oklahoma. NSU education professors go into the schools to work with first-year teachers, hoping to trouble-shoot and encourage them to stick with it.

"We want these new teachers to feel like they're not so alone," Rogers says.

Last July she took this unique retention program to the Fourth China-U.S. Conference on Education in Beijing, where she represented

KDP.

Rogers says she's still learning from her trip to China, the most exciting opportunity she's had with the organization.

"I've never seen such discipline in all my life," she says of the Chinese students, adding that she gave a lonely standing ovation to a children's orchestra at one of the country's demonstration schools.

"I had never heard anything like it! I didn't care if anybody else wanted to stand up with me or not," she says, laughing.

It's that kind of excitement she tries to spread at NSU, where she teaches classroom management and curriculum to undergraduate education majors. Though her specialty is in elementary and middle school reading — and she has experience in public schools — Rogers has found her niche with these college students.

"They're so enthusiastic about teaching!" she says.

She recalls her own early years in the field when, fresh out of Harding, she decided to pursue a master's. "I was working as a graduate assistant in the Write-to-Read program at Oklahoma State University," she says.

"I got so interested in it, I decided to go on and get my doctorate," which she did, completing it just five years after her undergraduate degree.

But 30 years later she still hasn't satisfied her appetite for knowledge or exhausted her fascination with the field.

"It's important to attend workshops and read experts," says Rogers. And she advises her university colleagues, "If you really want to know what's going on, get out into the schools."

Having been "raised in the teaching business," Rogers says she doesn't recall making a pointed career decision — her mother was a career teacher, and her father, a principal for a rural school district.

"I think it's true what they say, 'If you're raised in a teaching family, you either want to stay away from it for good or you love it for life.'"

As for Rogers, "I've never wanted to do anything else." TH

Smiths selected Distinguished Alumni; Uebelein receives new Young Alumnus Award

THE UNIVERSITY presented awards to its Distinguished and Outstanding Alumni at Homecoming's Black and Gold Banquet Friday, Oct. 20.

Dr. David Smith ('67) and his wife, the former Linda Byrd ('67), of Little Rock, Ark., received this year's Distinguished Alumni Award.

Linda Byrd and David Smith

A founding partner of Arkansas Heart Group cardiology clinic in Little Rock, Smith is a cardiologist dedicated to caring for patients holistically — healing the heart by healing the soul.

Putting his faith into practice, Smith has traveled to disease- and poverty-stricken Haiti each year since 1984. He was instrumental in founding a school for children in first through 12th grades after the local people asked for one in 1990.

Linda Smith is a full-time volunteer who frequently teaches ladies' Bible classes and retreats. The Smiths attend the Pleasant Valley Church of Christ in Little Rock, where he serves as a deacon. They also host a biblically-based study on bioethics for medical students each week in their home. The couple has three children.

New this year was the Outstanding Young Alumnus Award. Kevin Uebelein ('82) from Morris Township, N.J., has the honor of being the first recipient. He obtained a master's of business administration degree from Rice University in 1986, and now serves as vice president for global mergers and acquisitions for Prudential Global Asset Management Group. Kevin is not all business, however, having quite a musical flair as well. This tenor has sung for a number of regional opera companies, including The

Opera of St. Louis, The Memphis Opera Company and The Houston Grand Opera. In 1994 he gave a

Kevin and his wife, the former Laura Brooker ('82), have three children.

Each year the Outstanding Alumni Awards are also presented to a graduate of each of the six academic divisions.

The College of Bible and Religion recognized Steve Awtrey ('82), who has served as the youth and family minister for the Mid-County Church of Christ in St. Louis since 1986. Prior to taking his current position, Awtrey served as a youth and family minister with the Maryland Heights Church of Christ.

The School of Business honored Norman Bennett ('73) of Memphis, Tenn., for his work at Ernst & Young Inc. overseeing the financial services for the Mid-South region. He began public accounting work for Arthur Young & Co. in Dallas immediately upon graduation. In the course of his 21 years in that office, he became a partner with the firm, which later merged with Ernst & Winney.

Bill Diles ('58), who is currently serving his sixth year as assistant superinof The Diabetes Educator and Diabetes Care, and is a certified diabetes educator.

The College of Sciences presented its award to Dr. Kenneth Perrin ('55), professor emeritus of mathematics at Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif. He holds a master's degree in mathematics from Kansas State University and a doctorate in mathematics from Oklahoma State University. He was a professor of mathematics at Pepperdine's Seaver College from 1972 to 1996. Perrin also served as chairman of Harding's math department from 1962-1968.

Winfred Wright ('57) of Searcy, retired chair of the department of foreign languages and international studies, was awarded by the College of Arts and Humanities. He holds a doctorate from the Université de Toulouse in Toulouse, France. Wright joined the faculty in 1966, and in 1989 the University named him a Distinguished Professor. He has also served as a teacher at Crowley's Ridge Academy in Paragould, Ark., a minister at numerous churches, and a missionary to Belgium and France. IHI — April Mouser

FOCUS on the FUTURE

Start the new year off right — rate your estate plan

by ROWAN MCLEOD, director of planned gifts

A LOT CAN HAPPEN to date your estate plan: changes in your beneficiaries' lives, property changes, tax law changes and, most significantly, changes in your wishes.

Take this easy test to rate your estate plan by checking each statement that prompts you to some action. When you are done, count the check marks to discover how your estate plan rates.

Your Beneficiaries

- You want to change your designated beneficiaries.
- You want to be sure your children get your estate after your spouse's lifetime.
- You want to provide for the care of a minor child.
- You're worried about the ability of an adult child to manage money.
- You want to make a bequest to Harding or another charitable organization.

Your Property

- Your estate has increased through faithful stewardship, good investments, an inheritance or life insurance.
- You have given away or sold property named in your will to go to an heir.
- You need to review the beneficiaries of your retirement plan or your IRA.
- You are not sure which assets are probate assets and which are non-probate assets.

Taxes and Legal Concerns

- You'd like to know what estate taxes you will pay.
- You want to take full advantage of the unlimited marital deduction when a spouse is named beneficiary.
- You'd like to learn how charitable bequests — even with a life income to a surviving relative or friend — can reduce your estate taxes.

- You've moved to another state with different probate and tax laws.
- You wonder if the executor (also called personal representative) in your present will is qualified to settle your estate and dispose of your assets properly.
- You'd like to consider the benefits of a living trust for your current needs now and for probate simplification later.
- You now own property in another state or in a foreign country, and you're worried about potential probate and tax difficulties there.
- You'd like to have a self-proving will so missing witnesses won't hold up probate.

Rate Your Estate Plan

Calculate your plan by counting the number of check marks:

0 to 4. Congratulations! Your estate plan is better than most.

5 to 9. Not bad, but there are some nagging concerns.

10 to 14. You need to seriously consider a review of your estate plan.

Over 14. You're courting disaster. For the sake of those you care about most, don't put off an immediate check-up.

Why Put It Off?

In estate planning, the worst sin of all is procrastination. We know we should make plans, but for one reason or another, we don't get around to it. Remember, anticipation is usually worse than the reality!

We would be pleased to discuss your concerns about your estate plan. You may contact our office at (800) 477-4312, or write Harding University, Box 12238, Searcy, AR 72149, or e-mail mcleod@harding.edu. Of course, there is no cost or obligation. EH

DISTINGUISHED PROFESSOR DR. TOM HOWARD

A campaign to inspire Students

IT'S NOT SURPRISING to hear that a political science class is a hotbed of political discussion, especially in a presidential election year. It might be surprising, however, to hear that the professor never reveals his party affiliation or the candidate for whom he will vote.

"It would be an abuse of my classroom," Dr. Tom Howard, distinguished professor of political science and department chairman, says. "I never use the sions. This has been part of his teaching philosophy since he began as a social studies teacher at Belvedere High School in Illinois after graduating from the University in 1969.

Howard returned to the University in 1972 after two years with high school students. He served as director of institutional testing and research and was named chairman of the department of history and social science in 1993. He currently teaches courses in American national government and research and statistics for political science majors. He received the Distinguished Teacher Award in 1980, 1987 and 1998.

Though Howard has a passion for the subjects he teaches, he realizes not all students classroom as a forum to advocate my political views."

Instead, he uses it as an opportunity to present and examine all sides of the issues in a setting in which students are free to express their opinions and come to their own conclu-who enter his classroom will initially share his excitement. "A high school teacher piqued my interest in history and political science," he says. "But I know many students had a poor experience with the subject in high school." As a small incentive to help ensure their interest, Howard offered a Midnight Oil Coffeehouse gift certificate to the student who came closest to predicting the popular vote in the 2000 presidential election.

He believes that communication is the key to creating a good rapport with his students. "The first two days of class are the most important of the semester. You establish the learning environment." Part of this environment for Howard's students is the alphabetical seating chart. "I want to get to know them quickly, and I want them to get to know their classmates," he says. "I know of one couple that got married after an introduction in one of my classes."

Not because he wants to play matchmaker, but because he wants to get to know each individual, Howard has his students fill out index cards on the first day of class with information such as where they are from, their hobbies, what is unique about them, and what they expect from a Harding professor.

"The overall majority of students say fairness is the most important trait they want to see in a Harding teacher, second to being a godly man or woman," he says. "I work very hard at being fair. You can challenge them to learn and your course can be difficult, but students do not want to be treated arbitrarily."

"They also expect you to be a real person," he says. "You have to share a bit of your life with them." Howard maintains a faculty Web page that includes biographical information, reading assignments such as an article he wrote on the electoral college, and a link to his favorite band, ABBA. "I'm getting to know them; they're getting to know me," he says. "So they know, for example, that some of my grandkids live with them in Searcy Hall because my daughter, Cindy Gurchiek, is their dorm mom."

And though Howard will not share with students which political party he supports, he will give his impressions of various current events. "We spent 15-20 minutes in my government classes discussing Colin Powell's speech," he says. "You have to do it while it's relevant and fresh on their minds."

"It's fortunate that political science is a very dynamic subject. Beyond the basics, I never teach the same thing over and over again. This year we spent a considerable amount of time on the presidential election. My students became the dorm and coffeehouse pundits on the electoral college."

What has not changed through the years is Howard's sincere interest in the students: "You have to know them, love them and genuinely care about them. That must underscore everything you do in your classroom." ■
